mentoring for the student's educational success

Until now, there has not been a course for potential campus liaisons to learn specific skills to use while working conjunctively with on-line teachers and their students. This mini-course addresses that gap by offering activities to teach such skills. In addition, just as the online environment leads to generative learning among students, the collaboration of participants in this two-week course will spawn new ideas that can be drawn upon by campus liaisons to help online students succeed.

Course Goals:

1. To give experiential knowledge of the richness available through online courses.
2. To give authentic knowledge of the online learning medium by way of individual reflection to dialogue with other online participants.
3. To give techniques which will aid online K-12 students to excel in independent growth through group collaboration.
4. To give counselors tools to help identify students who may work well in online courses.
